Instead of taking your car to work, have a think about the alternatives.

Taking the time to plan a practical, more environmentally friendly journey can not only help you do your bit to cut down on carbon emissions, but can also save you some money, give you more time to catch up with work, the news or just have some extra “me time”. You can also improve your health and wellbeing too, there are loads of great benefits, so what’s stopping you...

Jump on a bus or train

Public transport allows you to make real time from the down time of travelling. You can plan that presentation or do the crossword while someone else takes the strain. Buying travel passes can be cheaper than taking your car, and you can use them at weekends too. And with real time train information available online, you can now check accurate times before leaving your home or work.

Walk or cycle

Start commuting on foot or on two wheels, and you’ll soon see the benefits for yourself. You’ll feel healthier, less stressed and maybe even lose some pounds. As well as helping to cut congestion you can also incorporate a hobby into your daily routine.

Help to plan your journey

www.gotoo.com provides FREE travel information for Tayside and Central Scotland including Angus, Dundee, Perth and Kinross and Stirling. This website provides a central point for all travel and transport information throughout the region, from real time traffic reports and bus and train timetables, to finding lift sharers as well as details of the local paths and cycle networks that are available across the region.
